PEOPLE from the Old World often remark that Canadian and American fruit, vegetables and meat are good-looking but tasteless.

They say that our food is grown and packaged for appearance only, and that in the struggle to attain picture-book size and color, both flavor and nutrition are forgotten.

attain picture-book size and color, both flavor and nutrition are forgotten.

I suspect that the charge is true. There is no reason why an apple, for instance, should not be large, handsome and tasty all at the same time. But it does not work that way. One quality seems to be gained at the expense of another.

The mass techniques of our machine civilization have been adapted from the factory to the farm. For maximum profit, live-wire farmers wring as many crops of large vegetables and fruit as they can from the land, keeping the tired soil in artificial good humor with pep pills and vitamins in the shape of synthetic fertilizers.

Other elements in the conspiracy are the North American zeal for sanitation, and North American concern for the outward appearance of a thing and indifference to its inner nature. I do not suggest that all linhabitants of Canada and the United States are guilty of these faults, but only that there is common tendency toward them on this continent.

A housewife will pay as much for two small scrubbed carrots in a plastic bag as she will pay for a dozen dirty carrots in a burlap sack.

The dirty carrots may be larger, more numerous and twice as nourishing. But they look messy. People of this continent do not like to think about the muck and slime from which life grows. They prefer to regard themselves as spirits who have no connection with the earth.

An earthy carrot is a rude reminder of man's connection with lower forms of life. It has no place with the earth.

An earthy carrot is a rude reminder of man's connection with lower forms of life. It has no place in the antiseptic environment which the mass production engineers, the salesmen and the advertising men have made for up.

Furthermore, it takes a little work to wash carrots and potatoes. North Americans — particularly, North American housewives—are getting lazier all the time.

Admiration for size was something that seemed to go with a new continent that was built on a large scale. The importance of a slick, handsome appearance has been dinned irto us now by two generations of entertainers and advertising men, in magazines, films and, latterly, television.

The idea of nourishment and inner worth—except for lip-service paid to it, for appearance's sake—has fallen into neglect.

The tasteless, sapitary carrot and the large, handsome, sawdust-flavored berry are neat symbols of our civilization.

The supermarkef, more than any other single institution, is to blame for the trend toward luscious-looking but insipid food. For all its merits of cheapness, cleanliness and convenience, the giant market has placed a premium on looks and has discounted flavor and nourishment.

However, it is futile to mourn too much about flavor and nourishment.

However, it is futile to mourn too much about the loss of these values. People of another generation will not miss them, because they will be brought up from infancy to eat cardboard apples and draw their real nourishment from vitamin pills.

Open It Wide

IF the City Council hoped to be relieved I of its shop-closing dilemma by a poll of retailers it has been disappointed. Approximately half of the questionnaires so far returned favor a 51g-day week and the other half a 6-day week. Some other replies favored neither, and in one instance both, which indicates the confusion attending this whole issue. It is a pity a poll could not be taken of consumers; the council would probably find that people at large are thoroughly fed up with attempts to restrict their shopping.

This past week has shown how anomalous become shop-closing bylaws through tinkering with what should be a fundamental freedom of stores to open and close as they wish. The ebb and flow of consumer trade should be left to decide the matter. There is far too much interference nowadays with the right of persons to work if they want to, and essentially that is what the city council is now entangled with. It had far better free itself of worries by washing its hands of store regulation as far as is possible.

Possibly the council will yet do this. It has authorized two bylaws to be drafted by the city solicitor, one permitting a "wide-open" policy and the other exempting drug and corner stores from present closing restrictions. The latter would not cure much. It would still leave a conflicting viewpoint about some types of stores which might claim to serve a necessary purpose. When it comes to definitions one many? went is averther, extending tions one man's meat is another's poison.

tions one man's meat is another's poison. It is patently absurd in this day and age, for instance, to regard the sale of gasoline as other than a public utility which should be available at all times.

Even in drafting a "wide-open" bylaw the city solicitor will have difficulty in framing the terms to avoid making fish of one and flesh of another. He should stretch the bylaw as far as the Municipal Act will allow, however, even if it means defining all businesses in order to exempt defining all businesses in order to exempt defining all businesses in order to exempt them. Once that is done the City Council should pass it without demur. It cannot please everyone no matter what it does, but a "wide-open" bylaw gives it the chance to get out of a regulating policy that constantly lands it in trouble. The less the council has to do with shop-closing hours the better, for itself and the public combined.

Base Metal Curbs

L ONG-EXPECTED action by the United States to cut imports of lead and zinc by one-fifth came this week, over continued objections by Canada made over the period of some months. The decision will be telt in British Columbia and three will be left in British Columbia and three other provinces, where base metal producers handle both ores in substantial annual volume. The notable example in this province is the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, the largest individual producer in the Commonwealth; and this province will be the hardest hit. Quebec, Newfoundland and Ontario also have bare metal operations which may be severally affected.

World prices for both metals have been at their nadir for some time, and marginal properties in this country are for the most part closed down. Damage, however, can arise also from the degree to which appears of to which numbers of mines rely upon their lead or zinc values to carry the cost of recovery of other metals and minerals. The American market was the only one that afforded any prospect of improvement at the moment, so that the 20 per cent involvement as the now will be Canadian.

ment at the moment, so that the 20 per cent import curb now will hit Canadian mining at an awkward moment. Underlying United States action pos-sibly was the situation in the world's base metal markets as a whole. During the prior boom period copper, nickel and a few special ores remained in demand through active use and through stockpiling. When that altered free markets could not absorb the increased production of base metals which had come into operation in the last few years around the world. Rhodesian mines are one instance of new recoveries on a market which at present consumption levels is oversupplied. THERE will be warm waterfront welcome for the ocean-going towboat "Sudbury II." acquired by the Island Tug and Barge Company for trans-Pacific missions out of this port. Built for the missions out of this port. Built for the British government, the heavy-duty towhoat has been in service with the Royal Australian Navy and associated services. Her salient features are a steaming range that spans the Pacific, and powerful engines developing 3,800 horsepower. As a successor to the famous original Sudbury, which built up an international reputation for deepsee salvage and towing, the Sudbury II will be the most powerful and fully-equipped towing vessel in Canadian waters on this coast.

Officials of the company have announced that the original Sudbury will be retained in service for the present. She has some outstanding deepsea operations

The UN - with all its faults and weak nesses—can point to successes, peace vie achieved through imagination and skill.

As John Foster Dulles of the United States and Andrie Gromyko of Russia spoke on the Far East in the General Assembly, UN sources reported qualified success in another critical area — the Middle East.

While the current tension swirls around Quemoys and Matsus in the Formosan Straits, it's easy to forget that only a few months ago people were talking freely of im-minent general war in the Middle East. The United Arab Republic on the one hand, and Jordan and Lebanon on the other now are reported to have agreed on a plan for a UN "peace presence" in their territories. No hard facts are known on just what form the "presence" will take, but even the term shows ingenuity, obviously designed to Everyone knows that one main purpose is to keep an eye on the ambitions of Gamal Abdel Nasser, but even he is reported agree able to the plan, providing the "presence" is based in Damascus, not Cairo.

One view may be that Nasser is merely giving himself a breathing spell after his suc-cesses. But international diplomats in the nuclear age are liable to be willing — even eager - to settle for the imperfect Hammarskjold's technique in the Middle East is something new in UN experience. The authors of the UN charter envisaged an international police force but nothing so subtle a "presence."

The ideal of a permanent international

Identification is perhaps the trouble, although there are authorities who explode the idea that specific tartans ever belonged to the clans and point to 17th and 18th century portraits which show emi-nent Highlanders wearing a whole jumble of tartans of different colors.

It is the "tarton" fad, however, that gives rise to talk of a ban; using tartan in the over-all sense of kilts, brooches, plaids, etc.

Too many people, 'of all origins, dress up in whole or in part in the paraphernalia of the Gael. They can do this if they please, of course, there being no law to stop them, but apparently the chiefs are wroth about what they call the "vulgarization of the Highland dress."

But if tartan ties, ribbons and souvenirs go all round the world, as they do, the fault is Scotland's

I suppose the chiefs object to foreign girls' pipe bands invading their native heath and to visitors flaunting the kilt or their "Scottishness" when touring North Britain.

Time was when imitation was considered to be a compliment, but 1 daresay there can be too much even of a good thing.

I must say that when I was over there this summer I didn't see the kilt very often—only on about three occasions, I think, leaving out the regimental band I heard on Princess Street. The weather wasn't too con-ducive to bare knees, however, and that may have daunted the visitors.

Every visitor to Scotland, or nearly every visitor, likes to claim kinship with that land. The number of clerks pouring over pedigree registers to discover a clan link for co tomers is astonishing. But maybe a visitor should let it go at that and not ape the natives in their dress.

Playing to The Gallery

By JOHN F. SEMBOWER

North American Newspaper Alliance BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Usually the experts pooh-pooh the observations of ordinary folks about "how unusual the weather has been lately," citing facts and figures to show that, barring minor discrepancies, it is running pretty true to form.

But a specialist here at Indiana University in world-wide weather condifions is on the other side of the fence; he agrees that this indeed is an odd year weatherwise.

Dr. George H. T. Kimble, chairman of the university's department of geography, has just made a global check and found that the United States is far from being the only part of the world where weather "has been playing to the gallery."

He says that unusual weather thenomena have been common throughout the world this year.

British Columbia has experienced one of its warmest and driest summers in a hundred years.

Japan's current rainy season is "unprecedentedly dry," starting with June rainfalls which were as much as 75 per cent below normal.

The British Isles and most of western Europe, on the other hand, experienced the wettest June in 50 years, and generally the trend toward unusually heavy rainfall has continued.

Dr. Kimble has just returned from an expedition to Africa and encoun-tered weather phenomena of a rare nature almost everywhere he went Lagos, the capital of Nigeria, had 18 inches of rain in the first half of June, or rather more than it had in the whole of June, 1957, which was its weffest June in history up to

Mr. Mortimore's interesting and informative series of articles concerning Canada's treatment of the Indians should make all politicians bang their heads in shame.

But it is not only the Indians who have been exploited by a vicious and archaic system of land tenure. If the full rental value of the land had been taken for public use during the last hundred years there would be no municipal or provincial debts, and there would at the present time be enough revenue left over to pay all residents annual dividends as proposed by Thomas Spence generations before Social Credit was ever heard of. And these-dividends would not be a mere $28 per year to home owners but would be a substantial sum.

For instance, the Colonist reports that for a 67-acre parcel of Indian reservé land in North Vancouver, British Pacific Properties Ltd. has offered $134,335 a year for an 80-year lease.

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP)—The high cost of women has turned men of the Karamojong tribe to cattle rustling.
Uganda Legislative Council was told Tuesday: "A bride costs 50 cows in the Karamojong country, and the young men steat cattle to marry."

In the first six months of this year, 16,000 head of cattle were stolen, 36 people killed and 167 people imprisoned. Pollee using planes and jeeps have been finable to stop the raids.

Council passed a bill empowering the government to impose special controls.

Whether Finance Minister Fleming is satisfied with the new debt set-up is anyone's guess, but it seems to have been a tremendous and costly conversion for the comparatively short time gain of $4.25 and the final provided in the United States is to cease at the end of this week. Congressional and presidential approval has been given to a law which will ban future contract trading in onions.

"Right now I'm coach of the Roughriders, and that's all I'm concerned with at this time," was the only comment rom Terlep, the former Notre Dame quarterback who was backfield coach last season with the Grey Cup champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Ryne Duren has been a splendid relief pitcher for the Yankees this summer. Day after day he has come trudging in from the bullpen when disaster threatened, set his spikes firmly against the rubber and fought the enemy back. Along with great resolution and a fine fast ball, he has exhibited coolness under fire, keen judgment, and that intuitive sense that tells a pitcher when the batter is going to take his cut.

It is sujdently, only as a matchmaker that Duren's judgment.

The batter is going to take his cut.

It is, evidently, only as a matchmaker that Duren's judgment fails when he chose Ralph Houk, he Yankee coach, as his opponent in a fistlight while the team celebrated victory in the pennant race, he was over-matching himself. Teddy Brenner, Buly Brown, Al Weill or any other professional in the field of pairing off puglicits could have warned him.

As an officer in the Rangers, promoted to major for value in the field during the Second World War. Houk won an enviable reputation as a handy guy with bazooka, flame-thrower or fists. There was one large member of Hitler's S.S. troops who probably still bears scars from the going over he took from Houk on V.E. day in Germany.

y in Germany.

If was inevitable that Houk would eat up Duren inside a und and he did. To be sure, the pitcher was stopped on cuts, it Nat Fleischer, curator of the boxing archives, does not cognize the technical knockout. This one goes into Duren's cord as "K.O. by-l."

Eyewitness accounts described the affair as a mismatch hich did not justify the big headlines it got in the papers, hat's almost always true of seuffles of this nature. Turn 30 uscular males loose around free champagne, and there's bound be some rough horseplay.

Why the Department is vigilant about fish

Everyone concerned with the fishing industry wants it to grow larger and become more profitable. This is only possible with top quality fish at all times, capable of competing successfully with other high quality foods. Inspection by the Department of Fisheries-an insistence on good quality-aids the industry in giving consumers what they want, and so belos to sell more fish and fish products.

In addition, educational work, scientific research, inspection of packing and processing plants, and many other operations all combine to help the industry become more efficient,

Small but Powerful

Familiar mushroom cloud rises over the Nevada desert following explosion of a small but powerful nuclear device that had been suspended 500 feet above the ground from a balloon. Note the almost total absence of a stem to the cloud, usually formed by dirt being sucked up from the ground.—(CPC)
